YOUNG PEOPLE WITH AUTISM
DEVELOPING AN INCLUSIVE SCHOOL ENVIRONMENT TO SUPPORT EMOTIONAL REGULATION AND RESILIENCE
Friday 9th December 2016, Cardiff

Dear Additional Needs Co-ordinator

Students with autism experience significantly more challenges than their typically developing peers. Only 23% of pupils with Autism Spectrum Condition (ASC) achieved 5 or more A*-C grades (including English and Maths) at GCSE, compared to 54% among all students in the same year, and exclusion rates (often due to provision that doesn't match need) are also significantly higher.

This course will look at the impact that a positive and inclusive school environment can have on emotional regulation for students with autism. Understanding of potential pressure points during the day: looking at the full school day and where the potential difficulties may lie and considering transitions, both in school and at home. We will also examine how an inclusive school can address these pressure points, providing a unique research and evidence-based approach to practical solutions.

About our presenter

Gareth D Morewood is a Welsh teacher who has been the Director of Curriculum Support (SENCo) at Priestnall School in Stockport since September 2002. During this time, he has shaped provision not only at Priestnall but also in a number of other schools and Local Authorities across the UK and Ireland through support, research, training and consultancy. Gareth also regularly supports parents/carers with SEND legislation and provision, as part of his wider interests in equality and opportunity for all.

Through his research, extensive knowledge and practical experience in developing whole-school approaches to supporting young people with autism in mainstream schools, Gareth has considerable experience in the development of evidence-based whole-school inclusive systems. He can be contacted via his website (www.gdmorewood.com) or on e-mail info@gdmorewood.com.
